A young girl was attending a church service with her mother when she started feeling unwell. 'I think I need to throw up,' she said.

'Well, go outside,' whispered the mother, 'and use the bushes by the front door of the church.'

The girl went out, but returned less than a minute later.

'That was quick,' said her mother. 'Did you throw up?'

'Yes, but I didn't need to go outside,' said the girl. 'I used a box near the door that says "For the sick".'

A three-year-old boy was examining his testicles while taking a bath. 'Mum,' he asked, 'are these my brains?' 'Not yet,' she replied.

A woman took seven-year-old Benjamin home and told his mother that he had been caught playing doctors and nurses with Jenny, her seven-year-old daughter.

Benjamin's mother said: 'Let's not be too harsh on them – they're bound to be curious about sex at that age.'

'Curious about sex?' said Mary's mother. 'He's taken her appendix out!'

'Mum,' said little Simon, 'you know that lovely vase in the dining room that's been handed down from generation to generation?'

'Yes. What about it?'

'Well,' said Simon, 'the last generation just dropped it.'
